TO DELEGATES AT RECEPTION

Chambers of Commerce Representatives Entertained at Pan-American Building.

EVENT IS QUITE BRILLIANT

Prominent Men of All Nations Guests of Washington Commercial Body.

In the beautiful marble home of the Pan-American Union, brilliantly lighted like a fairy palace, John Barrett, who is known to the world as the man who known to the world as the man who united the Latin-American nations of this continent, in connection with the Washington Chamber of Commerce, last night gave a reception to the delegates of the Fifth International Congress of the Chambers of Commerce and Industrial Associations. The reception was notable because among its guests were representatives of every civilized nation of the world.

The reception might well be called a review of the nations of the world, the sumptuousness of the far East, India. Arabia, and Turkey, the severe conservativeness of England, Germany, and Sweeden, the brightness of sunny Italy, Austria, and Spain, all blended into making the occasion one of the most notable held in Washington in recent years.

The magnificent scowns worn by the The magnificent gowns worn by the women, many of them fashloned after their native country, gave to the scene a picturesqueness and charm that will live long in the memory of those who attended.

U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Wenther Bureau,
Washington, Monday, Oct. 14, 1912-5 p. m.
The tropical storm is apparently cruiral over the Central Gulf, but no reports from its vicinity were received during Monday. Belated reports indicate that it passed northwestward beyond the Yucatan Charmel during Sunday.
It is decidedly colder in the South Atlantic States except Florida, and somewhat warmer over the central and western portions of the country.
Rains will continue Tuesday and probably Wednesin the South Atlantic and East Gulf States, and there will also be rains in the North Pacific States.
Over the remainder of the country the weather will be generally fair.

ROOSEVELT SHOT; NOT BADLY HURT

from the Auditorium, a message was sent to Mrs. Rooseveit at Oyster Bay, telling her of the shooting. She was informed that the wound was slight, and that the colonel had gone ahead with his speech, suffering ne disconsiture. Other messages were hurried out to various others of the colonel's family, including Congressman Nicholas Longworth, in Washington. Another went to George W. Perkins, the colonel's national manager, in New York. All bore the same assuring word that the wound was not dangerous.

was not dangerous.

The prisoner gave every appearance of being crasy. He mumbled to himself and looked wild-syed. In his pockets the potice found a letter addressed "To the people," in which Schrank wrote of what he called a dream that came to him in which he saw Roosevelt as the assessin of President McKinley.

Had Followed Reservelt. asserted in the letter that no President ought to serve three terms, Schrank informed the police that he had followed Col. Roosevelt around the country for

col. Rocsevelt around the country for the last week, to kill him.

"I went to the Coliseum in Chicago last Saturday night to kill Rocsevelt," asid the prisoner without a quiver.

"I waited around the entrance I thought he would come out of, but he fooled me. He came out by another door. It made me mad that I missed him. I was bound I'd get him here."

Col. Rocsevelt sat back in the motor car as an immense crowd that had witnessed the shooting yelled to him. With rare presence of mind the colonel, waving his hat, cried out: "My good friends, I'm not hurt; I'm going on to the hall to speak. Good luck."

The whole incident had occurred so quickly that the astonished crowd did nothing but stand still.

Rocsevelt then turned to the chauseur and, in a calm voice, said:

"Now just run her up to the Audito-rum. I'm not hurt and everything is all right."

At 11 o'clock the following bulletin was issued from Emergency Hospital, where the former President was taken following his speech.

"Col. Roosevelt has a superficial fiech wound below the right breast, with no svidence of injury to the lung. The bullet is probably lodged somewhere in the chest wall, because there is but one wound and no sign of injury to the lung.

"The bleeding was insignificant and the wound was immediately cleansed externally and dressed with serile gause by Dr. R. G. Sale, of Milwaukee, consulting surgeon of the Emergency Hospital.

"As the bullet passed through Col. Roosevelt's overcoat, other clothes, doubled manuscript, and metal spectacle case, its force was much diminished. The case, its force was much diminished. The colonel is not suffering from shock and is in no pain.
